CELEBRATING BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Theme: "Unsung Heroes & Heroines"

Black History Month is a time for celebrating and honoring African Americans that have made contributions to our country and the world! What better way to celebrate the month that has been set aside to honor African Americans than to expose your students or members to the museum that has been named in honor of Ida B. Wells, one of the greatest African American women that ever lived and the mother of the Civil Rights Movement.

The Ida B. Wells Museum would like to invite you to participate in the many activities and events that have been designed to honor and celebrate contributions of African Americans during the month of February.
